Dear Sir or Madam,

It is my pleasure to count Mr. Rezi SABASHVILI among the students of the Master's program Statistics for Evaluation and Forecasting (SEP), which I direct, and also previously among my undergraduate students in economics.

Rezi SABASHVILI is an outstanding student. He possesses a true capacity for hard work, which he knows how to deploy effectively, including when it involves acquiring new tools that he assimilates on his own initiative, as he demonstrated in the context of his research thesis. He is able to very quickly identify the subtleties of a situation and the challenges that must be addressed. He is a solid and reliable student, both because of his behavior (active participation in class, quality of his contributions) and the quality of the work he produces, on which one can rely with confidence.

Sociable by nature and endowed with a quick and pleasant mind, Rezi is appreciated by all members of the working groups in which he participates, as well as by his professors.

It is clear to me that any organization that recruits him will be glad to have done so, and that his integration into the host structure will take place with ease, efficiency, and enjoyment.

Yours sincerely,

Mrs. Emmanuelle Gautherat

Director of the SEP Master's Program
Associate Professor in Mathematics, specializing in Statistics (Section 26)
